Discovering the Hidden Treasure of Morphology

Work as a team. How many words can you create?

Having a common understanding of academic language is essetial to explicit instruction. Use the glossary beginning on page 212 in the B.E.S.T. English Language Arts (ELA) Standards book to fully define morphology and key related terms.

Still, Herodotus reported what he had been told, making it clear that he doubted the whole thing.

Today we know that the Earth's skies are not the same in the Southern Hemisphere as they are north of the equator. Phoenician mariners must have reached southern Africa; the story Hanno told was too wild to make up.

While the Babylonians and Egyptians were mostly farmers and herders, people of land and river, the Phoenicians and Greeks were more independent breeds: they were people of the sea. Many were mariners or merchants or both. In order to do their jobs well, they had to study the heavens. The stars held practical importance for seagoers; they couldn't leave that knowledge to others.

The Phoenicians lived in what is now Lebanon, at the eastern end of the Mediterranean, and also at a satellite city, Carthage, in North Africa. They are said to be the first who went boldly into the open sea (although their greatest contribution to the world may be the alphabet, an idea that no one else had come up with). By 500 B.C.E., when Hanno set out, the Phoenicians

CIRCUMNAVIGATE means 'to sail all the way around something. Since circumis Latin for "around," a CIRCUMFERENCE is the distance around the perimeter of a circle. If you draw a square (or any other figure) around the circumference, you are CIRCUMSCRIBING the circle. A MARINER is a seafarer, from the Latin root man which means "sea." Galileo, a Renaissance scientist (1564-1642), spotted big dark blotches on the Moon, mistook them for seas, and called them MARIA (the plural of more). We now know these "seas are bone-dry plains, but no one has bothered to change the name.
